

Graduate Tuition Scholarship: $20,000.00

The University of the District of Columbia (UDC) is accepting applications for the Graduate Tuition Scholarship for new applicants for the Professional Science Master's (PSM) degree tracks for fall 2023 through fall 2025. The PSM is an innovative, terminal degree that prepares graduates for science careers in business, government, or nonprofit organizations. Our PSM programs are carefully designed to prepare students in advanced and marketable skills in the competitive, professional world in the areas of Urban Agriculture, Urban Sustainability or Water Resources Management. By engaging in state-of-the-art field and laboratory trainings and a required internship at potential employer sites, each PSM program trains students to develop in-demand hard and soft skills, including analytics, critical thinking, effective communication, problem solving, quantitative and qualitative research skills, project design and implementation, entrepreneurship, and sustainable leadership. If you are considering a graduate degree with these essential marketable skills at an affordable graduate school, our PSM program is an ideal choice. If you have a strong academic background in either of the three PSM tracks, this tuition scholarship is for you to apply.

Scholarship Amount: $5,000.00 awarded each semester; renewable up to four semesters not to exceed $20,000.00 total tuition assistance.

Eligibility: A new student with a BS/BA degree and a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or above; requires acceptance into the PSM program.
