A STRATEGIC PLAN TO REGENERATE THE UNIVERSITY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA AS A PUBLIC HIGHER EDUCATION MODEL OF URBAN STUDENT SUCCESS 2019-2022

The Equity Imperative

Case for Investment
The Equity Imperative is a streamlined, focused and refined Strategic Plan designed to regenerate the University of the District of Columbia as a Public Higher Education Model of Urban Student Success.

The Equity Imperative is a plan that is right for UDC, for its students, and for the District of Columbia. The strategies it lays out—which were informed by input from town halls held around the city and suggestions gathered internally from students, faculty, staff, and our Board of Trustees—will transform the University into a powerful source of hope, education, creativity, research, and urban resilience as it guides many members of our community toward the middle class. Its tactics are affordable and its mission is essential to the future health and stability of the District.

The Equity Imperative will address UDC’s:

- Lack of student housing
- Old technology
- Insufficient personnel resources
- 50-year old infrastructure
- Outdated classrooms
- Low enrollment rates
- Low graduation rates

THE CASE FOR INVESTMENT

The University of the District of Columbia believes that the opportunity to gain an excellent education and thrive as a member of the middle class should be available to everyone.

Education is the key to equity. If you are born poor in the United States, you are almost certain to die poor. Education offers just about the only escape there is from poverty. In the District of Columbia, the median income for white households is $134,358, more than three times the $42,161 median for black households. Additionally, 92 percent of white residents have college degrees, compared to only 25.6 percent of black residents.

Many D.C. public high school and public charter school graduates are unable to take advantage of the federally funded Tuition Assistance Grant (DCTAG) program—which pays up to $10,000 per year toward tuition at public colleges and universities—because their families can’t afford to send them away to college, or they are not sufficiently prepared academically to gain admission to selective schools.

UDC can be the life-changing alternative for those students. The Equity Imperative equips UDC to offer nationally competitive programs that are affordable and accessible to District citizens who are seeking pathways to the middle class. The Equity Imperative will empower UDC to be a leader in public higher education and to support this vision, D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser recently pledged a significant “down payment” on the funds needed to achieve the University’s Equity Imperative Strategic Plan.
